Travel to NatureBridge in Olympic National Park

NatureBridge is located approximately three hours west of Seattle on the beautiful Olympic Peninsula. While we believe the trip to campus and this spectacular national park is well worth the travel time, we understand that coordinating this aspect of a trip can be daunting. We have gathered the information below in an effort to assist you with your planning. The nearest city is Port Angeles, WA and it is referenced in a number of descriptions below. Its downtown is located 20 miles east of campus.

Air Travel

The closest metropolitan airport is Seattle-Tacoma (SeaTac) International Airport. Groups traveling from SeaTac can get to campus via multiple routes, including a drive south to cross the Tacoma Narrows Bridge or by including picturesque ferry rides between Seattle/Bainbridge Island or Edmonds/Kingston (the latter is approximately 30 minutes north of downtown Seattle).

A second option is Paine Field Airport, located north of Seattle in Everett, WA. The airport began operating flights between Seattle and numerous California cities, Las Vegas, Denver and Phoenix in Spring 2019. Groups interested in flying into Everett can travel to campus via the Edmonds/Kingston ferry route described above.

Ground Transportation

Here are some providers that might be right for you, depending on your price range.

For those with small groups, large charter vans may be a more economical option.

Rental vehicles (including vans) are available from both SeaTac and Paine Field.

Public Transportation

For those with small groups and/or travel savvy participants, it is possible to travel to campus using public transportation. This option takes longer and requires more careful coordination than any of the above options. From SeaTac, groups can take the Link Light Rail to Pioneer Square, then walk to and ride the Bainbridge Island ferry. The Strait Shot* bus picks up from the Bainbridge ferry and transports passengers to downtown Port Angeles. From there, groups can ride the local bus #14 the last leg of the trip and disembark on US 101 just near the campus entrance.
